SMALL POX.
The Merits of Vaccination—How Far Virus is Transmitted.

A representative of the INTELLIGENCER had a conversation recently with the health officer of the city in regard to small pox and vaccination. Dr. Edwards has had a good deal of experience with the small pox, having at one time been connected with a hospital in Cincinnati where there were a large number of small pox patients—as many as one hundred and fifty at one time. He lived in the hospital—slept and boarded there, and was constantly in the atmosphere of the hospital and in contact with the patients. He never had a symptom of the disease, and enjoyed no other protection than that afforded by vaccination. He has also been in contact with several cases of small pox since he became health officer of Wheeling, notably the Jackson case at the pest house last year, and has enjoyed the same immunity from disease by virtue alone of vaccination.

This fact, the doctor's immunity from attack of the disease, brought up the general subject of vaccination, and especially the discussions of a number of medical men in this country and Europe who in favor of vaccination because it may be a means of inoculating the public with a class of blood diseases that are as bad as the small pox itself. The doctor does not take any stock in the views of those who set themselves up against the well attested beneficent results of vaccination, and says that they greatly exaggerate the extent of disease communicated by vaccination. He admits that there is a liability to contamination by the use of human virus—a virus that should never be used, and that no reputable physician will use these days if he can possibly help it.

That the use of human virus as vaccine matter can be avoided in the vast majority of cases is a fact well known to all physicians. There are numerous agencies of a perfectly reliable character in the country where the pure virus—obtained from cows—can be had. One of these is located at Fond Du Lac, Wisconsin, and the following account of the place and the method of obtaining the virus will be interesting to all our readers at this time. We quote from the Chicago Tribune of Tuesday:

"A great many people have an idea that the vaccine virus used upon them in vaccination is modified small-pox, brought down and modified through vaccination of a line of heifers. All this is entirely wrong. In the Health Department only pure, clean, bovine virus is used. In the State of Minnesota the State Board of Health uses humanized virus, to which there is great objection, owing to the liability of injecting impurities of one person's blood and into that of another. The danger from such contamination is entirely prevented by bovine virus, which is simply a reproduction of the cow-pox. Dr. E. L. Griffin, President of the Wisconsin State Board of Health, was in the city yesterday. He is the proprietor of the vaccine farm at Fond du Lac, and was at the Health office yesterday, where a Tribune reporter had quite a pleasant conversation with him. The doctor has twenty-five acres of land only which is sufficient for stable and ground room. Yesterday he received ninety-six young dairy heifers from Cayuga county, New York, for purposes of vaccination. They are all last spring's calves, and mainly Short-Horns and Jerseys, of red and white colors.

"Would bull calves answer for this purpose?" asked the reporter.

"Not after they are three months old. Then their skin becomes too coarse and hard, and we cannot use them."

"What do you feed them?"

"Only the best of hay, shorts, and oats. To the younger calves we must feed grain. We must have them sleek and healthy, and they must be cared for as you care for a child."

"How many do you vaccinate a day?"

"From twelve to twenty."

"How many times do you vaccinate a single animal?"

"Never but once. If it don't take we do not try again. We do with these heifers the same as we do with a child. We watch them very carefully, and generally on the seventh, eighth or ninth day the pustule ripens and we extract the virus and dip the points. When an animal does not take vaccination we rush it out of the stable directly into the market. They are as good as cures after that, for either dairy or stock-raising purposes."

"How many points do you secure from one heifer?"

"That depends. From 50 to 500 and 1,000. We generally expect to get about a thousand, but we can't always tell."

"Some people have an idea that your vaccination is an injection of modified small pox virus?"

"That's the sheerest nonsense in the world. We couldn't afford to and wouldn't dare to use anything else but pure cow pox virus. Mine was the third vaccine form ever established, and I don't believe that the profession could do without such farms to-day."

"To what can you use heifers?"

heifers. We get the best results from white and light red colors. We never get good results from black-colored ones. Their skin is too tight and hard. We have in our stables still times from twenty to forty heifers, which receive the closest of care and attention."

Recent Wool Sales.
Steuernville Bulletin.
Mr. Hemingway is again out looking for wool for Western mills, and among other lots he has purchased about 25,000 pounds from Horkheimer Bros., of Wheeling, and included in this are several fancy clips for which Horkheimers paid 42c, and even higher. As to the price paid by Hemingway, Sam George says that he did not pay less than 45c. But we presume he did. Whatever he paid it was worth the money, on any market, and was the best lot of wool ever owned or sold by Horkheimer Bros.

The market is still quiet in this section. There is comparatively no wool in this neighborhood on which to base any activity. Scattering clip lots are held at 45c, and there are fewer of them than ever before at this season of the year. Of second-hand lots, they are either sold or gone forward, the greater portion of them at 41 and 42c, although Hemingway's of Chicago paid Horkheimers more money for a lot of 25,000 pounds, which contained some of the Panhandle fancy clips. It goes on, we understand, to the Racine Mills of Wisconsin.

Premature Loss of the Hair.
May be entirely prevented by the use of Burnett's Coccaine. No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair. It softens the hair when harsh and dry. It soothes the irritated scalp. It affords the richest lustre. It prevents the hair from falling off. It promotes its healthy growth. It is not greasy or sticky. Burnett's Flavoring Extracts are known as the best.
